How's Your Liver?

Is the Oriental salution, knowing that good health caunot exist without a healthy Liver. When the Liver is torpid the Bowels are sluggish and constipated, the food lies in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood; frequent headache ensues; a feeling of lassitude, despondency and nervousness indicate how the whole system is deranged. Simmons Liver Regulator has been the means of restoring more people to health and happiness by giving them a healthy Liver than any agency known on earth. It acts with extraordinary power and efficacy.

NEVER BEEN DISAPPOINTED.

As a general family remedy for Dyspepsia Torpid Liver, Constipation etc., I hardly ever use anything else, and have never been disappointed in the effect produced; it seems to be almost a perfect cure for all diseases of the Stomach and Bowels.

HENRY W. GRADY.

Henry W. Grady is a native of Atlanta, Georgia, receiving a thorough collegiate education. After engaging for some years successfully in business, his ambition turned to journalism. He was the leading writer of several popular newspapers, and became the Georgia correspondent of the New York Herald. His writings through a series of letters under the title of "Sheep, Gold and Oranges," proved to be the means of reopening industries to the southern classes which were at the time in a drooping condition. Subsequently he became the editor and part owner of the Atlanta Constitution, which is now one of the most influential organs of the South. Numerous articles are contributed by him on Southern subjects to both Harpers and the Century Magazine, which have attracted national attention.

Mr. Grady's writings generally carry conviction, being both forcible and impressive; he is also a brilliant speaker, and destined yet to occupy some higher public position than he now enjoys.

A Mother in Court.

No human language can tell the woes and sorrows which strong drink entails upon the little children whose parents are enfolded in the hideous coils of this destroying dragon.

Robbed of parental love, bereft of home, deprived of food, raiment, education and position, drunkards children seem foredoomed to ruin.

And yet with what tender and heroic love these little ones sometimes cling to those who have covered them with shame, and struggle to rescue their helpless parents from the grasp of the destroyer.

A secular paper relates the following instance of a mother who had found her way into the police court in one of the great rum-ridden cities of America, where thousands of unprincipled men are licensed to make their living out of the vice, the poverty, and the ruin of those around them.

When the case of Mary S—— was called in Justice C. J. White's court, the most interested spectators were a little boy about seven years old, and a girl a year or two older. The woman had been disorderly, and was fined $10 and costs. The boy stepped up to an officer and asked: "What are they going to do with my mamma?"

"I am afraid they will have to send her to the bridewell unless you can raise $11 to pay her fine," was the response. The boy looked up at him a moment, while his under lip quivered and his eyes grew moist. Then, with an air of determination, said: "Come on, Hattie, we'll get the money."

A few hours later the lad came back to the station, and stood in front of the desk of the sergeant, twirling his hat in his hand. His head just came above the desk. "Well, my little man," said the sergeant, "what can I do for you?"

"Please, sir, I came to see if I couldn't get my mother out of jail," replied the urchin, as two big tears rolled down his cheeks.

"I've got $2.60 which was given to me; please take it and let me go in mamma's place. I can't work hard, but I'll stay longer." With this the little fellow broke down and commenced to sob.

"Don't cry, my lad," said Bailiff Kelly, who had overheard the conversation. "I'll not send your mother to the bridewell. I'd pay ten fines myself first."

The officers of the station became interested in the boy's manly bearing and his efforts to get his mother released. Justice C. J. White was seen, and consented to suspend the fine. The children were taken down to their mother, who was told how they had tried to beg the money for her release. It was the one touch of nature, and mother, children and officers held a little jubilee in the station.

"A woman with such children as yours ought not to be here," said the bailiff.

"No," was the sobbing answer, "and she never will be again."

God grant she never may be! And yet when temptation beckons at every corner and lurks at every turn, is it a wonder that people are led astray? There is no safety except in entire abstinence from the destroying cup, and there is no salvation but in Him who came to proclaim liberty to the captives and to break every yoke.—Safeguard.

Of 178 newspapers in Texas, 131 are said to be for the prohibitory amendment, 43 against, and four are on the fence, watching the fight and preserving with tender care their cowardice.

Switzerland has voted two to one to place the manufacture and sale of spirituous liquors solely within the hands of the Government, making it an exclusive government monopoly. The popular vote was 252,000 in favor, to 127,000 opposed.

Between 2,000 and 3,000 of the policeman of London are total abstainers. They held a meeting in Blenheim Hall the other day to protest against the custom of "allowing" liquor for policemen. They all say they are bet ter without it.

Tobacco blindness is becoming a common affliction. At present there are several persons under treatment for it at one London hospital. It first takes the form of color blindness, the sufferers who have smoked themselves into this condition being quite unable to distinguish the color of a piece of red cloth held up before them. Sometimes the victim loses his sight altogether. Although smoking is to a large extent the cause of the malady, heavy drinking is also partly responsible.—Scientific American.

In speaking of a recent defalcation at the Troy post office a gentleman said: "It is never safe to inclose an old bill in an envelope to be sent by mail. Why," said he, "men who are experts can tell whether a letter contain money or not simply by the sense of smell. If you will notice an old greenback, it has a peculiar smell about it that it can readily be perceived, even if it be inclosed within a letter. It is better to send a registered letter or a postal note, or, if you enclose a bill, be sure it is a new one. That will not smell."
